

WELCOME

A little curiosity. A new perspective.

Your introduction to tarot

You do not need to know every card meaning to begin. Start with a question, notice the imagery and make room for reflection.

Inside this guide

Understand the deck, try a simple reading and explore three beginner spreads. Finish with a reflection page you can use again.

Welcome to The Midnight Draw

Thank you for joining the mailing list and connecting with @themidnightdraw. This guide is an invitation to approach the cards with curiosity and your own judgment.

Personal tarot readings for Southern California events.
themidnightdraw.com

THE BASICS

Meet the deck.

What is tarot?

Tarot is a deck of illustrated cards used for reflection, storytelling and exploring possibilities. Readers approach it in different ways. This guide focuses on imagery, questions and personal insight.

Two parts of a traditional deck

A traditional tarot deck contains 78 cards: 22 Major Arcana and 56 Minor Arcana. The Major Arcana often explore larger life themes. The Minor Arcana bring attention to everyday experiences.

Four suits, four lenses

Cups

Feelings, connection and relationships.

Wands

Creativity, motivation and action.

Swords

Thoughts, communication and tension.

Pentacles

Resources, work, practical care and stability.

These are starting points. Names and interpretations vary by deck; your deck's guidebook can help.

Start with one card.

1. Choose a question

Try “What deserves my attention today?” or “How can I approach this situation?” Questions about your own choices are a useful place to start.

2. Shuffle and draw

Shuffle in whatever way feels comfortable, then draw one card. No special ritual is required. Begin with upright cards; reversed cards are optional.

3. Look before you look up

Notice the people, colors, setting and movement. What draws your eye? What feeling or story does the image suggest?

4. Read, then reflect

Check the guidebook. Which themes connect to your question? Treat the meaning as a possibility to explore rather than a fixed answer.

5. Choose one small action

Write one sentence about your insight and one practical step you might take. You can return later to see what still feels useful.

SIMPLE SPREADS

Give each card a role.

A spread assigns a question or position to each card. Read each card in its position, then consider the story they tell together.

A daily check in | One card

What can support me today?

Reflect: How might I put that support into practice?

Clarity and action | Two cards

Card 1: What needs my attention?

Card 2: What step can I take?

Reflect: How does the second card respond to the first?

Pause, release, welcome | Three cards

Card 1: What is present?

Card 2: What can I release?

Card 3: What can I welcome?

Reflect: What connects these three ideas?

Example of reflection

If a card suggests rest, that does not mean you must stop everything. You might ask whether a short pause could help you make a clearer decision.

KEEP IT GROUNDED

Perspective, not pressure.

You do not have to memorize everything

Use the guidebook and your observations together. A card can take on different shades of meaning depending on the question and surrounding cards.

A difficult image is not a verdict

An unsettling card can invite reflection on change, conflict or uncertainty. It does not establish that a specific event will happen.

Let one reading settle

If you feel tempted to keep drawing until you get a preferred answer, pause. Write down what you noticed and return when you feel ready.

Keep your choices your own

Use tarot as a prompt for reflection, not the sole basis for decisions about health, money or legal matters. Seek qualified support when you need it.

Try a gentle practice

Draw one card on three different days. Record your first impression, one guidebook theme and one small action. At the end, notice what you learned about your own attention.

YOUR PRACTICE PAGE

Make space for reflection.

My question and date

The card or cards I drew

What I noticed in the imagery

A theme that connected with me

One small action I can choose

Bring a little magic to your gathering.

Explore personal tarot readings and styled event setups in Southern California.
@themidnightdraw | themidnightdraw.com